MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

THE CINCINNATI DR-MATIC FESTIVAL, "OTHELLO" PRESENTED IN THE EVENING. BY TELEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE.

CINCUNNATI May 3.-McCullough has withdrawn from Mercutio, and his part will be acted on Saturday afternoon by Louis James. To-night we see Murdoch in "Hamlet." This actor is seventythree years old, and his style is of the elaborate school of the Kembles. You can, therefore, readily forcast the character of this performance. When the festival is over Barrett will have been seen as Cassius, Clifford, Benedick, Iago, Horatio and Romeo; McCullough will rave acted Brutus, Master Walter, Othello and the Ghost of King Hamlet; Mary Anderson will have appeared as Julia, Desdemona and Juliet; Clara Morris will have given two performances of Emilia; Murdoch will have assumed Aniony and Bamlet ; Mile. Rhea will bave presented Beatrice. Cincinnati will then have seen five of the great plays of Shakespeare and one by Knowles, a quantity of fine scenery, and several spiendid pieces of that sort of acting which, as a rule, it has not in past times widely appreciated or sustained.

Barrett, who is the only one of the actors who appears in every performance of the week, is beginning to suffer under the strain, but shows indomitable energy. Goodwin's share of the work consists of Modus and the First Gravedigger. The former part did not suit him, but the latter may. He gave a grotesque tinge to Modus, suggestive of a juvenile Dominie Sampson, whereas Modus is simply a bash-ral gentleman in a situation of comic perplexity. The quaintness and delicacy of this actor, on the other hand, gave much pleasure. John Ellsler has accomplished the astonishing feat of acting Dogberry without giving forth one ray of humor or getting a single laugh. Murdoch is invested with interest that attaches to a venerable

The "Romeo and Juliet" day is eagerly anticipated but the tide of strangers has already begun to obb from the town. The weather is hot.

Midnight.—"Othello" has ended. There was an audience of nearly 6,000 persons in Music Hall, mostly in full dress, and the scene presented was one of brilliant animation. The scenery used for "Othello" consists of five sets and a drop, and it is uniformly magnificent, both in composition and color. The first set occupied the full stage, which is fifty-two feet deep, and it shows a square with lateral streets, a tower in the centre and a bridge on one side. The first curtain feil at "bond-slaves and pagans," and after a wait of twenty minutes the Senate Chamber was disclosed—a vast ball hung with tapestry. After this came the Strand scene at Cyprus, and it thus the tragedy was acted down to Desdemona's vow scene with othello. Much time was saved by this expedient. The Strand picture presents a view, through missive double arches, of a distant forthicatio; beyond the foamy sea. A dark street, very picturesque, and Desdemona's chamber complete the pageant. There was some confusion in the handling, and this, together with the atmosphere of newness, somewhat impeded the actors. It is a perfectly fair comment, indeed, that the acting was overshadowed by the pageantry. Furthermore, but little of the piece was heard, except in scattered spots, in this theatrical wilderness. "Othello" cannot be spoken through a fog-horn.

McCullough's Moor, so often seen in New-York, and repeatedly described in your columns, presented a gorgeous appearance, and the pathetic part was never acted better by anybody. The Poutic Sea speech

Much of the acting was powerful and beautiful. McCullough's Moor, so often seen in New-York, and repeatedly doseribed in your columns, presented a gorgeous appearance, and the pathetic part was never acted better by anybody. The Pontic Sea speech rolled over the multitude like volumed thunder, and such passages as "Had it pleased Heaven," and "If it were now to die," were spoken with all the eloquence of a great heart greatly aroused. Barrett's lago was brilliant, and he gained several recalis. Its subtlety is perhaps somewhat too obvious; a lack of speciousness is now and then apparent. From temperamental reasons, this lago, instead of being more the soldier than the scholar, inclines to become more the scholar than the scholar than the soldier. But it is fairly scintillant with fine intelligence and intellectual character. The picture made by the two actors at "Never pray more" was superb, and it carried the house like a whirlwind, without any of the insane propensity to use lago as a mop which has been of late years accepted for Shakespearean by the devotees of Salvini.

The advent of Clara Morris into the Festival was accomplished as Emilia. The part does not awaken her splendid magnetic spirit, but she bore it through with discretion and gave it most illustrative business, particularly at her several exits. She was almost hidden from view by the flower pieces that were heaped upon the stage for her just before the last scene.

out she bore it throughout she beautifully spoken.

The Robinson The Robinson of Mr. and sevening at Chickering accordant with what is said of her by Brabantic and Cassio, and parts of the execution were caquiste. The forlorn bewilderment of Desdemona under the Moor's jealousy and anger was very lovely, and the ery of agony when socused by him went to every heart. An uneven performance, but affluent with the Wootook part in it acted with spirit and marked success. The saie of tickets for the performance at Chickering Hall has been large, but they may still be purchased either at Chickering Hall, at Pulnam's, No. 29 West 23d-st., or at Mr. Robert C. THE BOSTON MUSICAL FESTIVAL. [BY TELEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE.]

Boston, May 3.-The audience at the first matines of the festival was not as large as had been anticipated. The cause of this is not far to seck. Although the programme was a long one there were no really famous names on the list, save those which have become familiar to Boston audiences. Madame Scaleni would have been a much more drawing eard than any on the list. If the audiences are not growing larger, at least they are becoming more enthusiastic, and applause was liberally given. The orchestra had not any very heavy members. Tauberi's "Liebestiedchen" and Boccherini's minuet were both well played, but not of special musical value. The remantic overture to "Euryanthe" was well shaded and given with good ensemble. Mr. Henschel sang an air from Spohr's "Jessonda" in a clear, spirited and dramatic manner. Mine. Boema sang with Jather hard but brilliant voice in "Ah Perfido," by Beethoven. Her coloratur was commendable, but Beethoven demands more than this only, and Mine. Boema has a tendency to exaggerate. In a duet from Wagner's "Flying Dutchman" with Mr. Henschel she did much better. Mrs. Aline Osgood was in fine voice and sang an aria from " Euryanthe " in better style than anything she has recently done in Boston. Mr. Toedt sang an aria from Mehul's "Joseph" with not only sweetness but breadth and power. His legato singing was most artistic. Miss Mathilde Phillips, in an aria from " Tancredi," was husky, and her voice had a disagreeable quality on the upper notes.

The three chief points of interest of the programme were the Haydn motet "Insanae et Vanse." which was substituted for Bach's Sanctus," as the latter had not been sufficiently rehearsed, and proved to be a very ingenious and pleasing work. The overture to an imaginary comedy by Chadwick conducted by the composer was a most genial work. The composer was greeted with enthusiasm both before and after his work. The third point of interest was the Choral Fantasie by Beethoven, in which the same sextet that sang in Cheru-bini's mass appeared with Mr. Lang at the piane. The sextet orchestra and pianist did well, but the chorus seemed fatigued. It is constantly evident that the task of learning so many new and unfamiliar works is telling upon them and that they have been over-robearsed. They have certainly appeared to better advantage earlier in certainly appeared to better advantage earlier in the season. There were no encores accepted during the afternoon performance, although all the artists received recalls.

In the evening the "Redemption" was given before the largest andience vet assembled during the festival, an andience which filled the hall in every part. This fact seemed to sour the singers to their best efforts. The soloists were Misses Thursby, Winath and W. J. Winch. The prologue went splendidly in every part, the Winches singing in their best vein. John F. Winch and W. J. Winch. The prologue went splendidly in every part, the Winches singing in their best vein. John F. Winch and with praiseworthy dignity. William J. Winch are stated with praiseworthy dignity. William J. Winch grew steadily better throughout the performance. In the "Descent of the Holy Ghost" there is a passage of much difficulty for tenor, and in all previous performance there has been a break bere. On this occasion it was sung with absolute certainty and beauty. This steadiness was shared by all the performers. Miss Thursby in her solo, "From Thy Love as a Father," excelled herself, and the high U which she took at the climax rang out above the chorus superbly. Miss Winaut sang with great expression, but had no very great opportunities in the work. Miss Fisher also did good work in the concerted music, and in "The Voice Trom Heaven," which she sang from the second gallery, the nearest approach to Heaven possible in Music Hall.

Mr. Honschel was very dramatic in his part, although at first inclined to be somewhat too tenderly sweet. The chorus amply redeemed itself for all shortcomings in the previous performances. Where everything before had seemed half-hearted and lifeless, on this occasion everything was pregnant with life and power. The chorales were given with perfect balance and great dignity. The great chorus, "Unfold Ye Portals Everlasting," has become a specialty of the society, as much as the Hallelnjah Chorus or "Thanks be to God," and it was gloriously sung, as also was the fluale, "The Word is Flesh Become." The orchestra also was not lacking in the general enthusiaem. Its succession of pictures were given with thorough ensemble, "The March to Calvary," "The Redemption Theme." "The Darkness," "The Earthquake." "The Apostles' Prayer," were all done ample justice to.

MISS PATTISON'S BENEFIT.

The benefit to Miss Kate Pattison at the Fifth Avenue Theatre yesterday afternoon conferred a double pleasure upon the many friends of that excellent actress and pleasant lady: it allowed them to see her upon the stage entirely unrestrained by circumstances and to show by their attendance their appreciation of her as an actress and a woman. The play was Mr. H. C. Merivale's "The Cynic," which was produced for the first time in this country. Miss Pattison took the part of Daign Read a vome. a trying position owing to the absence of her nusband and the presence of her old sweethcart. Between her and the presence of her old sweetheart. Between her inclination and her duty she had a hard time, but duty triumphed and virtue was rewarded by the timely death of the husband in India and the marriage, also timely, of Daisy to her lover. MissPattson thus had a chance to represent the brilliant, fast woman in society and the true, good woman in the deepest distress. She played her part well throughout, and the andience showed their appreciation of her acting by hearty and frequent applicates. Miss Pattison's reputation as a fine actress was already showed that she fully deserved all that has been said in her praise.

showed that she fully deserved all that has been said in her praise.

Mr. Flockton who appeared as Count Lestrange, the very bad man who got everybody into trouble and was finally killed by a thunderbolt, made a great hit, if one may judge by the appliance that he won. It is a pity Mr. Flockton is not seen oftener upon the New-York stage. Mr. Cooper was tolerable as Dausy's lover, and Mr. Tilton capital as The Hon. Jem Gosling. Mr. Macdonald as Lord Rosherville, Mr. Buckstone as Sir Brummet Coates, Miss Chalgrove as Lady Luscombe, and Miss Measor as Carrie Beaufort acted with great eleverness. Indeed, the cast throughout was excellent. There were many actors in the audience, among them Mr. Kelcey Miss Coghiau, Mr. Plympton, Mr. Herbert and Miss Selina Dolaro. Mrs. Langtry occupied one of the boxes duing three acts of the play. Mr. Gebhard, who was with her, was much noticed. He sat in the rear, however, and most of the time rested his head in his hand, and his elbow on the back of Mrs. Langtry's chair.

MR. AGRAMONTE'S CONCERT.

A large and fashionable audience assembled A large and lasmonate authence assembled in Chickering Hail last evening, at the concert tendered Mr. Emilio Astamonte. A considerable array of names of performers of morit promised a degree of musical pleasure which was not realized, owing to the trivial nature of the programme, and the strong infusion of ams teur assistance. Even the members of the Philharmonic Club (Mr. Arnold, Mr. Heraman, Mr. Werner and Mr. Gantzberg-substituted for Mr. Richter) were only em-

Gantzberg—substituted for Mr. Richter) were only employed in two brief and light pieces, by way of beginning. Mr. Arnold also playing the violin obligato in a vocal quincette of Delibes. Such appearances of artists like these are merely melancholy.

In the rest of the performance the only artistic effect was made by Mass Elia Earle in two songs of Rubinstein. Mr. Francis Korbay sang his characteristic "Reed Songs" to words of Lenau, which are charmingly made, especially in the planoforte part, and would be telling in a small room, but are wasted before an audience in a large hall.

At the Sunday concert of the Cosmopolitan Theatre, Miss Emma Juch and other members of the Emma Juch Opera Company will appear. On Saturday evening, at the Casino, "The Steinway Hall was filled last evening at the concert (and first appearance) of the Chevaller A. de Kontski, who was assisted by Mnie. Sinico and Signor Campobello. M. de Kontski played his well-known Reveil du Lion," the Beethoven Sonata No. 2 of op. 17, "Reveil do Lion," the Beethoven Sonata No. 2 of op. 17, a scherzo from one of his own symptonies, his fantasia on themes from Gounod's "Faust," and half-a-dozen smaller numbers. His style of pianoforte playing is a mere survival from days now happily well past, and really offers no opportunity "to point a moral or adorn

On a table in the steamer's saloou were baskets and bouquets of flowers which had been were based and business and friends. Gathered on the pier were a large number of Germans who had come to say "and whederschen" to the departing actor. He arrived just five ninutes before the steamer sailed and the crowd gave him three cheers as he went on board.

A BENEFIT FOR HENRY TISSINGTON.

Henry Tissington, who has been connected years as musical director, had a benefit yesterday aftersoon. There was a long programme and the ourtain did not finally fall until nearly 6 o'clock. Charles Wyndham's English Comedy Company, Mr. McCauli's Opera Company and the Salsbury Troubadours took part, as did also Richard Mansheld, Osmond Tearle and others.

MR. PORTER'S WAGE TABLES.

THEIR ACCURACY ESTABLISHED BY BRITISH BLUE-BOOKS.
To the Editor of The Tribune.

SIR: There has come to my notice what is undoubtedly a fair specimen of the ignorant attacks studied the subject carefully enough to avoid failing into the grossest blunders. The Detroit Evening News recently reported that I had been sent to England by THE TRIBUNE "to find or manufacture arguments against Free Trade "; and in answer to my assertion that the spinners of Dundee receive only 8 or 9 andlings per week, quotes from the thirteenth report of the Massichusetts Burcau of Statistics of Labor for 1882, and says: "We find that the wages of British cotton spinners are just about four times as much as Mr. Porter says they receive. Mr. Porter must think that the readers of THE TRIBUNE are fools if he expects them to be-lieve such absurd falschoods." Of the malicionaneas exhibited in the above I shall say nothing. Of the ignorance exhibited in it I may be allowed to speak. The linen industry of Dundee is one thing, and the cotton industry of England is another. The wages of a spinner in the former average about 9 shillings ($2 16) a week; while the average weekly wages of a spinner in a fine spinning factory in England would probably reach $7.80 per week, or nearly four times as much. I have compared the Dundee tables of wages with the average earnings of operatives as returned under the Factories and Workshop act, by Mr. Redgrave, and find that his figures are even lower than mine. Of course I could have copied these figures into my Taibung letters, and mades "strong point" of their coming from Britan Blue Hooks, etc., and, perhaps, saved myself a great deal of very hard work; but I found out from inquiry that Mr. Redgrave was in some cases below the mark, and as I was after facts, I made my wage-tables higher on the average than he did. Here is a specimen:

Spinning Mills.	Estimate as given in Dunden letter	British	my estimate over the En- glish official estimate.
eparers	$2 25 2 50	$1.56 2.40	$0.69	ı
ye	1 50 2 00 3 00	1 02 2 80		۱
Factories.	7 00 3 50	7 00 3 00 3 00	.50	١
ea ere	3 50 3 50 6 50 4 00	8 50 8 50	.50 .50	١

Not only is this true of Dandee, but of other places also. The wage tables I have given are correct in the main. They run a triffe higher than the English estimates possibly, because I have constantly striven to keep upon the safe side. If Free-Traders diabelieve them, they have the atternative of using those published by Mr. Redgrave, which are lower.

ROBERT P. PORTER.

summarnly dealt with by Mr. Porter .- Ed.]

SUMNER (W. G.) "A MALICIOUS SLAN DERER."

AN INDIGNANT DENUNCIATION FROM A RESPON-· SIBLE MAN.

To the Editor of The Tribune. SIR: Professor Summer having used the Assoclated Press to spread abroad his oft-repeated assertion that the Willimantic Linen Company's dividends were 95 per cent in 1882, we deem it best to emphasize our oft-repeated denial, and say that his statement is false, malicious and slanderous. We believe Professor Sumner knows his statement to be false. The Willimantic Company's dividends for 1882 were less than one-fifth the amount claimed by him.

In spite of his denial that he was asked to correct his In spite of his denial that he was asked to correct his uniruth, wa repeat that he was so requested and offered by us us every opportunity through an examination of our books to convince himself of his error. This examination he has declined to make. Our books are still open for examination by any party interested, and they prove beyond a possibility of a question what we have above stated. This dividend falsehood, originally started as a sensational item. Professor Sumner has striven to transform into a truth by the simple process of affirmation. The task is too much even for him with all his jugglery of figures, which would not deceive even a child infinance, much less "any man who understands investments."

E. H. HEYWOOD'S RELATIONSHIP TO SEN-ATOR HOAR,

To the Editor of The Tribune. SIR: In THE TRIBUNE of April 14 you say I am not acousin of Senator Hoar, but some one must have mis-informed you, for my family name was Hoar until 1848, when it was changed to Heywood. My grandfather came from Concord and was a brother of Senator Hoar's as-cestor. Yours truly, Princeton, Mass. April 19, 1883.

'THE TRIBUNE's statement was based on a personal dispatch to its Editor from Senator Hoar himself, distinctly saying that the statement that Mr. Heywood was a relative of his was totally without foundation. Senator Hoar is a gentleman of the highest standing and unimpeachable veracity. Mr. Heywood is the person who was arrested for sending indecent matter through the mairs. The public have no doubt as to which should be believed, or as to the motives of each in the dispute that Mr. Heywood raises.-Ed.]

WAS THE WOMAN A VICTIM OF MRS. CARMAN ! A

On the afternoon of August 26, 1881, Joseph W. Ritchie while gunning in the swamp on the farm of Mrs. Raynor K. Smith, near Baldwin's, Long Island, found the remains of a woman cut in pieces and done up in two bundles. The identity of the woman and the manner in which she met her death have since remained a mystery. Detective Payne, who has been working on the case for nearly two years, says he has secured positive proof of the dead woman's identity and also other facts that will at last clear away the mystery and bring her slayer to justice. Detective Payne says that the dead woman was Ella E. Clark, of Bridgeport, Conn., who was missing from her home nearly four months before her mutilated body was found in the Long Island swamp. She was brought to the house of Mrs. Morgan Carman, at Wilburn, by certain man from Philadelphia, where she subsequently died from the effects of criminal medical practice, her body being afterward concealed in the swamp.

Mrs. Carman is now confined in the Queens County Jan awaiting the action of the Grand Jury on a charge of having caused the death by malpractice of Mrs. Sidney S. Smith, of Oceanville, L. The next morning the wagon tracks were visible, and the bars at the end of the lane were found down. Mrs. Carman is known to have had a young wagen at her lange at health of the lane to the swamp. woman at her house at about the time the death of Miss Clark would have occurred.

LABORERS AND EMPLOYERS.

The striking cigarette-makers held a meeting yesterday at the West Side Germania Assembly Rooms. There were about 500 present. Permanent officers were elected to take charge of the strike, and it was decided that the girls should go in a body om the Germania Assembly Rooms to the factory fo their pay on Saturday. Secretary Butler says that the company cannot and will not pay men more than 70 cents a thousand. Only about 200 of the charette-makers are on strike and their places will soon be filled.

The labor-rs in the Weigner's department of the Custom House were all at work yesterday morning. There is some talk among the men of striking again for a further advance before long, but as a rule they seem to be satisfied, and the weighers anticipate no further difficulty.

PITTSBURG, Penn., May 3.—The coal miners' strike developed nothing particularly new to-day. When asked for his opinion of the nature of the crime with which Sheridan, Walsh and Typan are accused, he said: "The murders cannot un any case be considered of a political nature. As I understand the case, politics has nothing to do with it, as this is similar to any ordinary case. If a man commits murder in England and seeks an asylum in this country, his extradition can only be justified when the offence is so far established that under the laws of our country the person would be liable for apprehension and committal if the crime were committed here. The accused men may resist extradition by testing the evidence. The prisoners in this case will be charged with murder, I suppose, and of course it will be for the defence to raise the point of the nature of the murder, whether political or not, and the judge will settle that point. I have not given the subject any consideration at all, as I have not as yet been notified of any probable proceedings in the case and have consequently received no instructions."

All this time the fire was gaining and the efforts to control it were unavailable. The captain ordered Pilot Franklin to head the steamer for the Vancouver shore and beach her. As soon as the vessel struck the sand the boats were lowered. The excitement was now so great that numbers of Chinamen jumped into the boats and swamped them. Owing to the intense smoke those who could swim did not know in which direction to strike out, and, surrounded by a mass of struggling Chinamen, were drowned. It is supposed that at least fifty persons, including Captain J. Jaggers, lost their lives. Only twenty persons are so far known to have been saved. Steamers have been despatched to the scene. dile to the company.

It should be added that at the date in question there was also a further admitted ba ance due from the Government for other services, which we do not refer to in detail, but confine ourselves to the question of postal services.

The company has caused to be stated an account, made up to July 1, 1878, upon the principle that the compensation should be fixed with reference to express service, as being most nearly the "same kind of services" referred to in its coarter and it results that the amount due from the Government is $1,084,991.25. Of this amount it is admirted by the Government that at the rates extempted to be fixed as above by the Post Office Department there is due to the company $864,101.11, leaving in dispute the sum of $870,890.14. The question whether the standard adopted by the company is a sound one, remains for judical determination by the Court of Claims, to which the cause has been remitted, since, as declared by the Suprome Court, some other elements may possibly be anown, which, if shown, would affect the question of "reasonable compensation."

Next as to the account between the Government and the company since the Thurman act world into effect, down to the period ending December 31, 1882, to which period the account stated of your letter are brought. The Internal act prescribes no rate for postal services, but leaves the compensation therefor to be governed by the original charter. It prescribes by the fourth section "that there shall be carried to the credit of a sinking fund therein provided for on February I in each year one-half of the compensation for services (helading postal arrivice) rendered for the Government (not applied under acction second in liquidation of interest), and in addition therefor to be governed by the original charter. It prescribes by the fourth section to applied under acction second in liquidation of interest, and in addition therefor to be governed by the compensation for services (helading postal arrivice) rendered for the suck year on th

Now it is obvious that to determine what will constitute 25 per centum of the net earnings, the amount due for postal services must be ascertained, and the question, as above stated, is still pending for judicial determination as to the rates which shall constitute reasonable compensation. Any claim, therefore, of the Government for immediate payment under the Thurman set must be based either upon conjecture or upon the rate of allowance for postal services fixed by the Post Office Department which the Supreme Court has rejected, or upon the allowance for that service at express rates as claimed by the company.

ment which the Supreme Court has rejected, or upon the allowance for that service at express rates as claimed by the company.

Adopting the rates thus claimed by the company, the directors have caused an account to be stated for the entire period after the Thurman act took effect down to December 31, 1882, the period at which the account transmitted by you ends, which account it will furnish you if you desire. This account shows that the waole amount due the company for postal services during the period and upon the principles above stated is (cents omitted) $4,650,027. Beducting from this the amount of postal services as fixed by the Department (under the ruice applicable to all other roads, $1,911,138, leaves the sum in dispute between the company and the Government for this period $2,738,889, it is to be noted that your account does not credit the $69,358 paid in by the company in July, 1881, and referred to in your letter. The sum stated above, $2,738,859, it will be seen, is lar in excess of the balance due the Government as stated in your letter, without taking into account the $820,890 due the company for postal services prior to the Thurman act as above. And it seems hardly reasonable to require the company more these croumstances to pay the balance that claime, by you until the question in controversy can be judicially settled.

In submitting this their views, the directors ask that any errored principle or of dotail, if such be found, may be pointed out by you and the same will receive their respectful consideration.

Commissioner of Ratiroads. THE IDEAL ST. NICHOLAS CLUB.

Robert B. Remsen was talking with a Thisune reporter the other night about the disagreeent in the St. Nicholas Club, of which he is an old member. "The design of the older members, when we started the club." said Mr. Reinsen, " was to have an old fogy club, somewhat like the Certury Club, for stay-at-home old fellows like myself. We did not want any restaurant por any show of any kind. But we kept taking in our boys and other men's boys, until the young party out-voted us, and we shall now see what they can io. others, was to wait until we had about $50,000 or $100,000-we had $30,000 once-and then to buy a good site, and by floating bonds erect a house. A regular Dutch house, I wanted, with the gable end to the road, as the historian said the citizens of Albany all stood years ago. In such a place, we could put an old picture or Dutch clock or spinning wheel or some ourtosity, you know, and it would soon be a regular treasure-house, invested with the charm of old Kuickerbocker history, a unique organization and a credit to the city."
